Subic port tops revenue goal by over P1-B

The Bureau of Customs (BOC)-Port of Subic posted PHP22.4 billion revenues for this year, surpassing its annual revenue goal of PHP 21.1 billion or by PHP1.2 billion.

District collector and lawyer Rhea Gregorio on Friday said that as of December 28, the figure was the port's highest-ever collection.

"This is the most significant milestone for the port after breaking past the PHP20 billion mark for the first time," she said in a statement.

The Port of Subic official noted that import duties and other taxes collected were 37 percent higher than last year's collection of PHP16.3 billion.

She credited the 2018 positive revenue performance to the strict implementation of customs laws and rules and regulations.

"This enabled the port to recover its deficit in the past three quarters and finish strong toward the last quarter of the year," Gregorio said.

She added that the tax take of the Port in December significantly contributed to its annual revenue collections, with the figure reaching PHP2.4 billion for the month.

The amount is higher by PHP544.6 million than the port's revenue goal during the period or a positive growth of 28.5 percent.

"The revenue collected for the month of December is the highest monthly collection in the history of the port," she said.

Gregorio also expressed gratitude to the hard work and sacrifices of the port's personnel for this achievement. (PNA)

CAMP OLIVAS, Pampanga -- At least 898 areas in Central Luzon have been designated as firecracker zones for the safe celebration of New Year's Day.

Chief Supt. Joel Napoleon Coronel, acting director of the Police Regional Office 3 (PRO 3) on Saturday said the designation of firecracker zones conforms to President Rodrigo Duterte's Executive Order No. 28 seeking to confine the use of firecrackers only in assigned places.

"The use of firecrackers in the designated areas will be conducted under the supervision of a trained person duly licensed by the Philippine National Police (PNP)," he said.

Meanwhile, the PRO3 chief appealed the residents to refrain from using illegal firecrackers to avoid any injuries.

"Instead of using firecrackers, we could all welcome the New Year with other forms of merriment to ensure a safe and healthy celebration of the holiday festivity," Coronel added.

IN THE NAVY

First WTI Takes Command of Naval Warship

By Gunner's Mate 2nd Class Ian G Johnson , LCSRON TWO Public Affairs

MAYPORT, Fla. (NNS) -- Cmdr. Lenard Mitchell became the first Warfare Tactics Instructor (WTI) to take command of a Navy warship during a recent ceremony here aboard Freedom Class littoral combat ship USS Little Rock (LCS 9).

"The tactical foundation, thought process, and critical thinking the WTI program provides will be a huge help as we employ LCS," said Mitchell.

"Coaching, teaching, and mentoring are ways we can train better, make stronger Sailors, and be ready to meet any challenge we face as a team. You don't get anywhere by yourself. In the Navy and in life, you owe that to someone to pay that forward. In this case, I'm going to pay it forward to my crew, ship, and the LCS program."

A Canton, Miss. Native, Mitchell enlisted in the Navy as an operations specialist before graduating from Southern University in Baton Rouge, La., and earning a commission in 2000. Before his 2014 selection to the WTI program, he completed sea tours aboard USS Devo (DD 989) and USS Gettysburg (CG 64) as a strike officer, weapons officer, and combat systems officer. Mitchell said his experiences developed his love for tactics that was necessary to succeed in the WTI training program.

Naval Surface and Mine Warfighting Development Center's (SMWDC) WTI program trains high-performing junior officers in advanced tactics and Surface Warfare expertise before they are placed in production tours where they plan and support advanced tactical training exercises, develop doctrine and tactics, techniques, and procedures (TTP), and provide operational support. After these tours they return to the fleet to increase the lethality and tactical proficiency of the Surface Fleet by infusing their knowledge and experience within the watch teams they support and lead.

"Being a WTI challenges your tactical thinking and planning skills," said Mitchell. "But, it's in the production tours where we make our buck." Serving as tactical mentors and instructors at the Afloat Training Group (ATG), the Center for Surface Combat Systems, or SMWDC Headquarters, giving back to the fleet, getting out on ships on the waterfront and actually sharing that knowledge, raising the warfighting ethos for the Tactical Action Officer and tactical watch standers on ships is really where the WTI program makes a difference.

Mitchell is a graduate of SMWDC's Integrated Air and Missile Defense (IAMD) program in Dahlgren, Va., a rigorous 15-week curriculum focused on the Navy's most cutting edge tactics and technologies for talented surface warfare officers. The program includes classroom instruction with the Aegis Training and Readiness Center (ATRC) in Dahlgren, Va., tactical training, mission planning, and on-site visits with the Naval Aviation Warfighting Development Center (NAWDC), and various Army and Air Force commands. Additionally, WTI candidates each have a specific research focus area to start them on the path to building expertise in that particular area.

"Before we deploy, I'm looking forward to taking the Little Rock team through Surface Warfare Advanced Tactical Training (SWATT) and other advanced tactical training exercises," said Mitchell. "The SWATT exercise and the Plan-Brief-Execute-Debrief process challenges the warfighter, the watch team, and will make the whole LCS program better."

A fast, agile, mission-focused platform, the littoral combat ship is designed for operation in near-shore environments yet capable of open-ocean operation. It is designed to defeat asymmetric anti-access threats such as mines, quiet diesel submarines and fast surface craft.

Stockdale Wraps Up Port Visit to Muscat, Oman

By Mass Communication Specialist 2nd Class Abigayle Lutz, Carrier Strike Group 3 Public Affairs

MUSCAT, OMAN (NNS) -- The guided-missile destroyer USS Stockdale (DDG 106) successfully completed a scheduled port visit to Muscat, Oman, Dec. 24.

The four-day visit provided Sailors the opportunity to experience Omani culture and traditions, partake in tours, and interact with local citizens.

"The crew was excited to make our first port visit to Muscat," said Cmdr. Leonard Leos, commanding officer, Stockdale. "Its rich culture and history, beautiful scenery, warm beaches and relaxing hotels were just what my crew needed. It gave us a chance to relax and take in all that Oman has to offer."

For a lot of the Stockdale crew, this was their first port visit in the U.S. 5th Fleet area of operations.

"I went sightseeing," said Logistics Specialist 2nd Class Christopher Caithness, from Morehead City, North Carolina. "I got to relax at my hotel and see the beach, which was peaceful."

While on liberty, Sailors participated in several cultural tours sponsored through the ship's Morale, Welfare and Recreation (MWR) program.

One of the MWR tours was to see Oman's "grand canyon" where Sailors were able to explore the scenic side of Oman.

"I love travelling, I love going hiking and I love nature," said Ship's Serviceman 3rd Class Joseph Musngi, from San Diego. "Every place you visit, you should do a tour. On my tour we went to the highest point of their grand canyon. We also visited a market and I had some really good quality coffee. The tour amazed me because I love seeing nature, meaningful places and different cultures."

Stockdale is deployed to the U.S. 5th Fleet area of operations in support of naval operations to ensure maritime stability and security in the Central Region, connecting the Mediterranean and the Pacific through the western Indian Ocean and three strategic choke points.
